On Wednesday, July 9, 2008, Community National Bank in Morristown, Tennessee reported that Carlos E. Wolfe, one of the area’s premier Loan Specialists, has recently been hired as a Senior Vice President in the bank’s loan division.

“Carlos is a superb addition to our team of loan specialists,” said Sam Grigsby, Jr., Community National Bank CEO. Grigsby went on to add, “Carlos has worked in the loan industry for over thirty-two years and brings a significant degree of product knowledge and experience to the table. He fits well with our overall philosophy and truly understands our customer’s needs. We’re very pleased to have him with us.”

As a Loan Specialist, Wolfe will work with customers through the entire loan process in both private and commercial loan areas. Private loans comprise products dealing with home improvement, personal, auto, personal residence construction loans and more. Commercial loans include such topics as business purchases, real estate development, and loans to contractors for home building and commercial development. Wolfe is a graduate of the Tennessee Young Bankers School and the Commercial Lending School of Banking. Additionally, Wolfe holds a license as a Residential Contractor.

Throughout the years Wolfe has been, and continues to be, an avid supporter of civic organizations. He has previously been involved with AYSO, the Girls Club and the Boy Scouts of America. Currently, he is on the Board of Directors for the Senior Citizens Home Assistance and actively supports the United Way.

A native of Hamblen County, Wolfe and his family have been members of the Talbott community for the past twenty-four years. He attended Morristown Hamblen High School West and is a graduate of Walters State Community College. Wolfe and his wife, Debra, have three adult children and a grandchild, Abbigale. The family attends Thankful Baptist Church.
